What is the Right to Development (RTD)?

The RTD in Global and Regional Human Rights Instruments and Systems

- United Nations Declaration on the Right to Development
- Inter-American Human Rights System
- African Human Rights System
- Arab Charter on Human Rights
- Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Human Rights Declaration
- OIC Independent Permanent Human Rights Commission – Abu Dhabi Declaration
"an inalienable human right by virtue of which every human person and all peoples are entitled to participate in, contribute to, and enjoy economic, social, cultural and political development, in which all human rights and fundamental freedoms can be fully realized” (Article 1.1)

It is a human right, and the source of the human rights-based approach to development

It is both individual and collective

It has both national and international dimensions

It entitles everyone to participate in, contribute to and enjoy development in its economic, social, cultural and political dimensions
Principles and Elements

- People-centred development. “The human person” is the central subject, participant and beneficiary of development.

- A human rights-based approach. Development should be carried out in a manner “in which all human rights and fundamental freedoms can be fully realized”.

- Participation. “Active, free and meaningful participation” of all individuals and peoples.

- Non-discrimination. “No distinction as to race, sex, language or religion”.

- Equity. “Fair distribution of the benefits” of development.

- Right of peoples to self-determination including full sovereignty over all their natural wealth and resources.

Who are the rights holders and duty bearers of the right to development?

Rights Holders: The human being, both individually and collectively
a) All individuals
b) All peoples and the entire population
c) Emphasis on women, children & other groups

Duty bearers:

a) States have the primary responsibility to respect, protect and fulfil the RTD at three levels (A/HRC/15/WG.2/TF/2/Add.2, )
   i) Internally through national policies and programmes
   ii) Internationally, through policies extending beyond their jurisdictions
   iii) Collectively, through global and regional partnerships
b) International Community
c) All human beings, and all those whose actions and/or omissions have an impact on human rights and on the environment in which these rights are fulfilled
Inter-American Human Rights System

Charter of the Organization of American States 1948

Details the concept, rights and duties of integral development, the overall purpose of which should be the “establishment of a more just economic and social order that will make possible and contribute to the fulfilment of the individual” (art. 33)

Integral development is the common and joint responsibility of Member States (art. 31), preferably through multilateral organizations (art. 32).

Cooperation among States in this regard “should include the economic, social, educational, cultural, scientific and technological fields, support the achievement of national objectives of the Member States, and respect the priorities established by each country in its development plans, without political ties or conditions (art. 32).
Article 26. Progressive Development

The States Parties undertake to adopt measures, both internally and through international cooperation, especially those of an economic and technical nature, with a view to achieving progressively, by legislation or other appropriate means, the full realization of the rights implicit in the economic, social, educational, scientific, and cultural standards set forth in the Charter of the Organization of American States as amended by the Protocol of Buenos Aires.
Article 22

1. All peoples shall have the right to their economic, social and cultural development with due regard to their freedom and identity and in the equal enjoyment of the common heritage of mankind

2. States shall have the duty, individually or collectively, to ensure the exercise of the right to development

Article 37

The right to development is a fundamental human right. All State Parties shall establish development policies and take measures to ensure this right. They must give effect to the values of solidarity and cooperation among them and, at the international level, to eliminate poverty and achieve economic, social, cultural and political development. In accordance with this right, every citizen shall have the right to participate in the development, and contribute to and enjoy the benefits, of their goods and fruits of their labour.

Other relevant Articles include:

Article 39
Young persons have the right to be afforded the most ample opportunities for physical and mental development.
A section of the ASEAN Human Rights Declaration (2012) is devoted to the right to development. In paragraph 37, Member States recognize that the implementation of the right to development requires effective development policies at the national level as well as international cooperation, and that States should mainstream aspects of the right to development into ASEAN community building as well as work with the international community to promote development.

Paragraph 35 (definition based on the UN Declaration on the RTD)

Paragraph 36 (On the duty to adopt development programmes including sustainable development and progressive narrowing of the development gap in ASEAN)
Abu Dhabi Declaration 2016 – Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) Independent Permanent Human Rights Commission

Affirmed that the RTD is an indivisible, interdependent, interrelated and mutually inclusive individual and collective right, which belongs to all individuals and peoples in all countries without discrimination on any grounds, including foreign and colonial occupation.

Urged the OIC Member States to take concrete and urgent actions to:

- reinvigorate political will for implementing the RTD;
- mainstream human rights and the RTD norms into development plans and ensure system-wide coherence to bridge implementation gaps;
- strengthen international cooperation with multilateral development institutions to address persistent challenges and create linkages with the ongoing international initiatives like the SDGs taking into account national circumstances and priorities.
The Role of the UN Human Rights Office

The RTD is specifically mentioned in UNGA Res. 48/141 establishing the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. The High Commissioner is mandated to:

“promote and protect the realization of the right to development and to enhance support from relevant bodies of the United Nations system for this purpose”

- Supports the Working Group on the RTD and the Special Rapporteur on the RTD
- Annual report on the RTD by SG and HC to GA and HRC and annual report on globalization and its impact on the full enjoyment of all human rights by SG to GA
- Supports Human Rights Mechanisms which address related issues, including Special Procedures on International Solidarity, Democratic Order and UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and other Treaty Bodies
- Organises events, raises awareness and produces resources to build capacity on RTD and related topics including trade, investment and climate change
- Research and advocacy on RTD, international cooperation, trade, investment, finance, technology, intellectual property, Human Rights Impact Assessments, corruption, and creating an enabling environment for sustainable development
- Supports RTD implementation at the global, regional and national levels
The Role of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the RTD

The Working Group was established in 1998 with the following mandate:

- to monitor and review progress made in the promotion and implementation of the RTD as elaborated in the Declaration at the national and international levels, providing recommendations thereon and further analyzing obstacles to its full enjoyment, focusing each year on specific commitments in the Declaration;

- to review information submitted by States and other stakeholders on their activities related to RTD; and

- to present to the Human Rights Council an annual report on its deliberations and suggesting possible programmes of technical assistance at the request of interested countries with the aim of promoting the implementation of the right to development.

RTD and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development

The relationship between the RTD and SDGs: Towards mutual reinforcement and synergy in action

- Great Strides Forward v. Uneven Progress:
  For people in Africa, least developed countries, landlocked developing countries, small island developing States, and most other developing countries, as well as for vulnerable and disadvantaged communities in both the Global North and South.

- The 2030 Agenda aims “to leave no one behind” and commits to “reaching the furthest behind first” by ensuring that the SDGs and targets are met “for all nationals and peoples and for all segments of society.”

- “The 17 Sustainable Development Goals and 169 targets ... seek to realize the human rights of all and to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls.” (A/RES/70/1, preamble)

- The new Agenda ... “is grounded in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, international human rights treaties... It is informed by other instruments such as the Declaration on the Right to Development.” (A/RES/70/1, para. 10)

- “The new Agenda recognizes the need to build peaceful, just and inclusive societies that provide equal access to justice and that are based on respect for human rights, including the right to development ...” (A/RES/70/1, para. 35)
“The 2030 Agenda is a child of the right to development (.....) But the right to development extends even beyond the massive global agenda of the Sustainable Development Goals. It offers a framework in which to address gaps and failures in responsibility, accountability and regulation in both national and global governance. At the international level, the right to development addresses multiple challenges which originate in our failure to adequately regulate globalization.”

RTD and SDGs: Towards mutual reinforcement and synergy in action

RTD Principles and Elements

- People-centered development
- Participation, equality, non-discrimination, accountability and transparency
- State as primary duty bearer
- Good governance & global partnership: national and international dimensions of development
- Promote international peace and security

SDGs and targets

- SDGs 1-16
- SDGs 1, 2, 4, 5, 8, 10, 16
- SDGs 10, 16, 17, a, b, c targets under all SDGs
- SDGs 16
The RTD and the New Development Policy Framework

- The Addis Ababa Action Agenda on Financing for Development
- The Paris Agreement on Climate Change
- The Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030
- Trade, investment, finance, aid, debt, technology, intellectual property and other such global arrangements must be addressed through the RTD's normative framework, to create an enabling international environment for development.
The RTD is a Key to Sustainable Development

‘The right to development should be fulfilled so as to meet equitably the developmental and environmental needs of present and future generations’

- Principle 3, 1992 Rio Declaration on Environment and Development;
- Article 11, 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action.
The RTD is a Key to Sustainable Development

The Added value of RTD to SDGs:

- Human rights as an end: respect, protect and fulfill human rights
- The human rights-based approach: entitlements and stronger claims, emphasis on accountability
- States as primary duty-bearers
- States’ duty to cooperate: international cooperation and partnership are obligations
Potential Contribution of SDGs to Operationalizing RTD:

✓ Consistent goals and targets
✓ Similar emphasis on Duties of States
✓ Universal adoption of SDGs: strong political will ✓ Enabling environment, policy space and policy coherence
✓ The international dimensions of the RtD: SDG 17 on strengthening the means of implementation, revitalizing the global partnership and AAAA
The RTD addresses systemic and structural issues and root causes of poverty, inequality and conflict. Its effective implementation will help to reduce poverty and inequality, prevent conflict and promote progress, leaving no one behind, so that all individuals and peoples may live with freedom, equality and dignity, and enjoy lasting peace.

The SDGs and targets, building upon the achievements of the Millennium Development Goals, involve the entire world, seek to address MDGs’ unfinished business, and are integrated and indivisible and balance the three dimensions (economic, social and environmental) of sustainable development.
The Declaration on the Right to Development provides a viable path to the Prevention of Conflict, Peacebuilding, Sustained Peace, Sustainable Development.

The 2030 Agenda and SDGs, reflecting and integrating human rights principles and requirements, are a plan of action for people, planet and prosperity.
